WHAT IS A WEBSITE LEASING OR WEBSITE RENTING?

Small or new businesses often struggle to pay 5 to 7 lacs to build their new website and not have surplus money to promote them. Development of a website can be time-consuming and costly affairs. Website maintenance, server costs, and designing costs can often get out of control. Moreover, to keep web-site current, constant tweaking and upgrading adds more time and cost.

So, there is a better way to handle this – renting or leasing a website!

According to Wikipedia “Website leasing is an agreement between the user (lessee) and the owner (lessor) whereby the privilege of using a website is offered in exchange for regular payments. Website Rental is a similar concept, however, often does not always require a fixed agreement.

The idea of website leasing or Rental is for a user to have a website promoting their products or services but not have any overall ownership of the site (in some cases the Domain name can be owned by the lessee or renter). Generally, the website owner will charge a monthly or annual fee for this service.”
